

Improved Medicare for All Quick Facts

Problems	<ul style="list-style-type: none">•The USA spends twice as much per capita on health care as other industrialized nations, yet we rank near the bottom in nearly all health indicators (including life expectancy and infant and maternal mortality).•30 million Americans still have no health insurance and another 44 million are underinsured, with copays and deductibles they cannot afford.•Most U.S. household bankruptcies are due mainly to medical bills – and most of those households had health insurance.•Our prescription drug prices are the highest in the world. Congress has prohibited Medicare from negotiating drug prices.•Each year, one trillion of our healthcare dollars go to administrative costs (31%).
Solutions	<ul style="list-style-type: none">•Having just a single payer, like Medicare, can cut administrative costs in half, saving $500 billion dollars annually.•Negotiating drug and medical device prices can save $150 billion dollars/yr.
Advantages	<ul style="list-style-type: none">•The savings are more than enough to cover all Americans’ healthcare including dental, vision, and prescriptions – with no co-pays or deductibles.•95% of households will spend less for healthcare under Medicare for All than what they spend now - and get wider and better coverage.•Care remains private with free choice of doctors and hospitals.•Health decisions will be made by you and your doctor – not an insurance company focused on maximizing profits.•Medicare for All means businesses will no longer pay for overpriced private health insurance. It will level the global playing field for US companies.•Americans can change jobs or become entrepreneurs without fear of losing health insurance.
